POULTRY

COMFORTABLE HOUSE
ENCOURAGES FOWLS

The poultry house is both the home of the hen and the factory where winter eggs are produced, and unless it provides suitable living and working conditions the hen cannot be expected to lay well. To be comfortable the house must be dry, well ventilated, well lighted and have sufficient floor space to provide exercise by scratching. Dryness is insured by having a good roof, keeping the floor of the house higher than the surrounding ground, and by providing good ventilation. Ventilation must supply plenty of fresh air without drafts. This is secured by having the south side relatively open and the other three sides absolutely tight. The importance of light in the poultry house has not been properly emphasized in the past. Recent experiments with artificial lights show that by furnishing more light so that the working period for the birds is lengthened the egg production can be materially increased. In many farm poultry houses no windows are provided and the house is in constant twilight on cloudy days even when the door is left open. Needless to say, this condition does not favor activity on the part of the hen. To insure good natural light in a poultry house the openings in the walls should equal about one-fourth of the floor space of the house. At least half of these openings should be for open-top ventilation, and the windows should be so arranged that the maximum amount of sunlight will be available to the birds. Wherever possible openings should be placed in the east and west ends of the building so that the early morning and late afternoon light will be secured. To insure room for scratching not only must sufficient floor space be provided but the droppings must be kept off the floor and a deep litter of straw or similar material be supplied so that the birds can be made to scratch for their feed. To keep the droppings off the floor every poultry house should be provided with a droppings platform arranged underneath the roosts to catch the manure.

Dried Buttermilk Found Profitable for Poultry
At the Indiana experiment station several tests have also been made with dried buttermilk for laying hens. In one of its bulletins on this subject, A. C. Phillips, who conducted the tests, in which dried buttermilk was compared with liquid buttermilk, says: "The income from the liquid buttermilk-fed pen was $7.13; from the dried buttermilk-fed pen, $8.21; and from the no-milk-fed pen, $2.39." Stating the same facts in different words, Mr. Phillips continues: "The profit over feed cost from the liquid buttermilk-fed pen was $4.92; from the dried buttermilk-fed pen, $5.99; and from the no-milk-fed pen, 78 cents."

Thus we see that the pen fed dried buttermilk as a protein carrier, made the largest profit per bird per year. The pen that received no milk of any kind netted less than $1 per hen per year. In addition to getting more eggs from the dried buttermilk than from the liquid buttermilk, that institution also obtained greater hatchability in the eggs from the dried buttermilk pen than from the one fed liquid buttermilk.

Emden Geese Popular
The Emden breed of geese is one of the best known and most popular of all the varieties known. Individuals of this breed are large, and beautiful. The back is fairly straight while the under part of the body is canoe shaped, or, almost crescent. They have blue eyes, orange bill, shanks and toes and pure white plumage. Size and vigor are the principal features to be considered when mating these birds. It is quite common for the females to develop a "dewlap" or loose pouch of skin under the body.

Poultry Facts
Keep strong, healthy, vigorous stock and care for it properly.

Know the preferences of your market and strive to meet them.

Never wash eggs unless they are to be used immediately by local trade.

Don't wash dirty eggs. Washed eggs spoil quickly and are of lower market value.

The first essential in marketing quality eggs is quality production. When proper methods are employed it is easy to produce and market quality eggs.

Keep the hens off the dropping boards by putting three-fourths-inch wire netting immediately under the roosts.

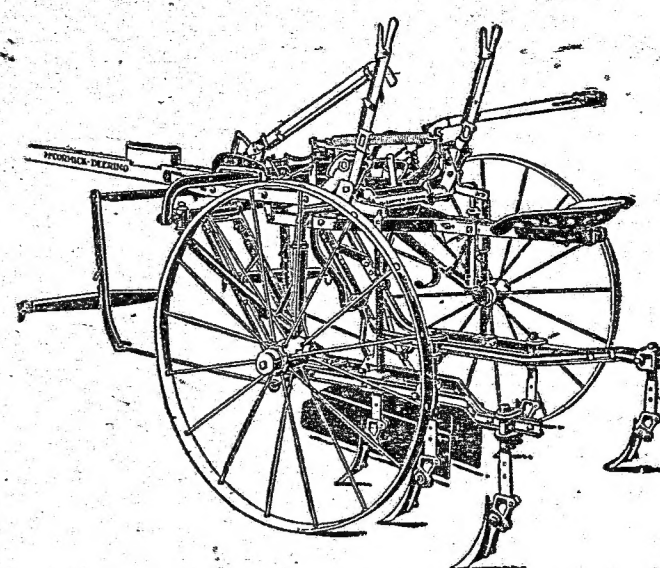

Watch for cracks and do not have strong drafts in the roosting rooms. If you neglect this, you will have to fight colds and roup later on.

Confine the hens to the poultry house when the yards are muddy until the middle of the afternoon, when most of the eggs have been laid. This will mean fewer dirty eggs.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS
The best candidate for office wins—if he gets more votes than the other fellow.

A political demonstration by your party is synonymous with a riot when pulled off under the auspices of the other party.

"Once upon a time" is a familiar beginning for fairy stories, and after a man has been once upon a "time" he begins to tell them to his wife.

Get the Big Yield!

From the first day those tender corn plants push through the soil into sight, you look anxiously down the corn row and picture in your mind's eye the harvest beyond. What that harvest will be depends much on your cultivator and how you use it. Do you like to use it? Is it easily controlled?

McCormick-Deering Cultivators

Long ago our McCormick-Deering cultivators went through the experimental stage. As worth-while improvements were discovered they were adopted. Today—wherever you go, you hear them praised for their good work; their easy operation; their convenient adjustments; and the comfort they provide the user.

You should go to the store of the McCormick-Deering dealer and look them over. Samples are set up there for you. Climb into the seats, shift the pedals, handle the levers. Then let the dealer quote you the low prices. You will quickly agree that these popular cultivators give real value for the money, and these are days when real value counts big.

The following is a list of cat breeds, tame cats, broken cats and wild cats. The main varieties of the United States are given as Scotch, Select, Silver Nine and White Tartan.

The trouble was that the linotype operator consistently hit the letter "C" and had turned a treatise on cats into one on cats.

Clyde, the Clown

By ROSCOE G. SCOTT

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

EVERY town has a Clyde Davis. God saw fit in His great plan for this world to send down to each community somebody to make other people laugh. Everything Clyde Davis did was funny—at least to us, who spent our rather listless days in Middletown, Ind. When he came after his mail the post office always rang with a good shout of old fashioned merriment. Our church socials went flat if Clyde happened to be away in Indianapolis seeing a show. He won more baseball games for our school team than all the members of the nine.

In our amateur theatricals he shone best. In our home newspaper would merely have to say:

The play given next Tuesday evening at the Opera House has a talented cast, the chief comedy role falling into the capable hands of our true humorist, Clyde Davis.

That was the trouble with Mildred Walker. She took Clyde's love making as a joke. Not that she didn't care. She did. Mildred Walker would tingle under the quaint bits of love making, but when she heard the humorist—until she saw his face and then she would break from his arms with laughter—saying his face looked so much like Buster Keaton's.

A year before, Millie graduated from the local high school. Clyde had been out of school three years and was trying with friendly overtures to build up a dejected little garage business taken over from a slipshod uncle. He had the promise of a good automobile agency when he got on his feet and he would have been standing there erect months ago, had he had Mildred. But she poohed such an extravagant compliment.

Then to make matters far worse, two things came along. The first was a catastrophe—Millie Walker inherited a hundred thousand dollars from her grandfather, Walter. The second was the advent of a dramatic coach, who hailed from Boston and coached plays for a living, after an alleged successful fling in metropolitan vaudeville. The whole thing looked like the makings of the old fashioned melodrama with Clyde Davis the dejected hero, Millie, the pure hearted heroine, and DeVoss Langdon—he of Boston—the villain. Langdon talked knowingly of "back stage acting" and "hogging the spotlight" and very early he branded Clyde a "ham comedian"—but he retained him in the cast, for there was none other to be found.

One hesitates to jump to conclusions, but at the local hotel several of us booby unwisely told this Langdon of Millie's fortune, by way of getting reflected glory for ourselves.

The night of the play I saw Clyde take Millie to the darkest corner of the theater and I saw her run away from him. I knew the jig was up between the two. Clyde muffed every chance at a laugh that night and was funny only because he was so miserable and acted so rottenly.

She came to him afterward. I think she felt guilty because. He told us that DeVoss was leaving after business arrangements the next night and Millie was going away with him. He confided in me the whole story. Millie had told him that her folks were set on Clyde and thought her love for him was her intuition. "But, goah, Be," he said to me tragically, "the real stuff." He told me how he had offered his clowning to help her get away, for the Walker home is less than fifty yards from our little depot and facing away from the tracks onto the Main street. Clyde was to amuse the family with stunts just at train time and Mildred was to beat it with her suitors. My protests were hushed. He said he wanted to.

I watched him the afternoon of the elopement. I had a point of vantage that nobody has ever seen. He started off fooling with Millie's little sister, Bessie. But nothing would tempt the parents from the house. For some strange reason Clyde's feeling had lost its charm. He clomped with the little sister, with Millie's great Dane, he called her in vain to the house for them to see his stunts; once Mrs. Walker came to the door; but she went back and far away the engine of the East-bound train whistled for Middletown. Her folks had always come out before to smile over her antics. Millie might think he was not honest in his desire to serve. If he failed she would only despise him. DeVoss had told her to the train in the hotel back fifteen minutes before. Millie was prisoned by parental eyes.

An idea! His fooling was forgotten. I saw him stagger about. I heard him shriek: "Oh, God, I am dying!" Then he fell headlong and before I could get to him, Millie's father and mother were bending over him and he was half laughing, half crying. Into our circle came Mildred, peering up savagely and taking up his head in her arms. I heard him whisper to her in a true stage whisper that she must rush. But she held on and he was not allowed to explain. And the Boston dramatic coach dashed boldly boarded the train and the village had been—true to form—flooded.

"I am so glad you did it, Clyde," she said as she cried over him. "I thought it was all real and then I knew how much you meant to me."

Which all goes to prove that the old melodramas were not so far off after all!

Poet's Odd Experience

There is an instance, recorded some time ago, of the late poet James Whitcomb Riley's experience when some strange impulse drew him out of bed and prompted him to write his poem "Bereaved," the simple story of the death of a little child. At the time, Riley had no knowledge that the child of any one in whom he was interested was even seriously ill. He could not imagine why this instant thought should have come to him. But in his mail a few days later came a letter from his old friend Bill Nye, announcing the death of one of his children on the very night that the strange thought had come to the poet.

Widespread Belief in Horseshoe as Talisman

The horseshoe is one of the very oldest talismans for woeing good fortune that exists. The belief in its efficacy is held almost all over the world, and has been a part of the dawn of history. You find it in Egypt and nailed to the threshold of the feld and wicker wigwams of the nomads of Turkestan.

In medieval England, especially in the southwest, horseshoes were often nailed on church doors to keep out evil spirits and witches. There used to be two huge-ones on the south door of the parish church of Ashby-Foville, in Leicestershire, says the Family Herald.

There are records of a number of horseshoes having been nailed up for centuries on the gates of Oakham castle, in Rutland, which was built by Waktell de Ferrars, son of the first earl. Every nobleman visiting it was made to forfeit a shoe of the horse on which he rode on pay forfeit of money. Quite a number endured the inconvenience of parting with a shoe rather than pay the small sum.

Probably the oldest continuous display of a horseshoe for luck to be found in Britain is the case of a shoe nailed up at Horseshoe corner, in the city of Lancaster. The first one was cast by the horse of John of Gaunt, when he was riding through the streets nearly six hundred years ago.

The more nails in a "found" horseshoe the greater the luck.

Wild Well Aware of Failing of Humanity

Among other amusing stories in his "Memoirs and Adventures," Sir Arthur Conan Doyle tells a characteristic story told him by Oscar Wilde.

"We were discussing the cynical maxim that the good fortune of our friends made us discontented. 'The devil,' said Wilde, 'was once crossing the Libyan desert, and he came upon a spot where a number of small flocks were tormenting a holy hermit. The sainted man easily shook off their evil suggestions. The devil watched their failure and then he stepped forward to give them a lesson. "What you do is to be true, said he. 'Permit me for one moment to tell you the truth. The hermit said to himself, 'Your brother has just begun made bishop of Alexandria.' A scowl of malignant jealousy at once clouded the serene face of the hermit. "That," said the devil to his lips, "is the sort of thing which I should recommend."

Must Not Be Separated

Faraday, the great chemist, learned a lesson in boyhood by a very childish experience. As a little lad, humbly earning his bread selling newspapers in the streets, he was waiting outside for the morning issue, and thrust his head and arms through the railings of the iron gate. He was a born metaphysician and began to speculate on which side of the railings he was. "My head and hands are on one side," he said to himself, "and my heart and body are on the other. What then is the matter?" He had just begun to philosophize when he saw a policeman coming. He hastily before he could disengage himself, and the wrench he received taught him, as he said in after life, that all true work required head and heart and hands to be on the same side.

Do Good Work in World

Those to whom a common sense appears to be extraordinary are rare, but they are precious, since they, and they alone, have built up our minds. They are the creators of human intelligence, the wide-eyed individuals who point out the error of mankind what has been accepted as a matter of routine. They are the poets, religious leaders, story tellers, philosophers, theologians, artists, scientists, inventors. Commonly unnoticed "things" excite a strange and compelling curiosity in them, and compel them to question the status quo. They see where others are blind, hear where others are deaf. They form the noble band of wonderers—James Harvey Robinson.

Franking Privilege

The privilege of sending and receiving mail free of postage was once enjoyed by the President of the United States, vice president, heads of departments, senators and representatives, and other officials of the government during their official terms. For a time all former presidents and their widows were permitted to use the privilege, but by an act of 1873 the privilege was abolished. By later acts it was conferred on all officers of the government in the case of official correspondence. In 1895 members of congress were allowed this privilege in their official correspondence.

Alone in His Progress

"Tell me," said the interviewer at the bedside of the aviator who had fallen three thousand feet and was lying on his back, "what was your dominating thought as you fell through all that space?"

True to his record for coolness, the aviator lit a cigarette, smiled and said: "Why, I think the thought that impressed me most was that I was going about the only thing that wasn't going up."

Making His Peace

Hubert, who had been sent to bed for being naughty, could not get to sleep. At 10 o'clock he crept down the stairs and said to his startled mother: "Didn't you say I was not to go to sleep until I had made my peace with my enemies, mummy?"

"Yes, dear," was the reply.

"Well, I've come down to forgive you and dad."

Official Terms Vary

Presidential terms in the various republics are as follows: Argentina, six years; Austria, four years; Belgium, four years; Bolivia, four years, not eligible for re-election; Brazil, four years, not eligible for re-election; Chile, four years, not eligible for re-election; China, five years, president may be re-elected; Colombia, four years, not eligible for re-election; Costa Rica, four years; Ecuador, four years; Finland, six years; France, seven years; Germany, seven years; Latvia, three years, no person can hold office more than six consecutive years; Liberia, four years.

"OLD-SALT" TALES

By CAPTAIN IRA PERKINS

(Copyright.)

Elephants Abaft

WITH one strong push of his thumb the captain tamped down the tobacco in the bowl of his story brar pipe. He struck a match. There was silence among his boy admirers until the pipe was under full seaway and drawing properly.

"Most of you boys saw the elephants in the circus yesterday," the captain meditated a moment. "But, boys, there is as much difference between these Indian elephants which the circus owns and a real, live, stampeding, battling African elephant as there is between your grandpa's pussy cat and a live, spittin', wildwoods boss."

"There isn't an African elephant in captivity today. That shows you what sort of fighters they are."

"Of course, now and then, one of them has been trapped. Several times men have brought them out from the jungles alive. There was one like that."

"We had been up the Congo river on the African west coast. Our ship was an old three-masted schooner. She had belonged to a man who liked fancy trimmings, and her decks and cabin were cluttered up with carved woodwork, which may have added to her good looks, but did not add any to her ease of handling or safety in a heavy sea."

"We were tramping it. Our captain and owner was one of those who think that it's better to take long risks and win big rather than go in for a safe thing which only stands to show a small profit."

"Ivory was our present aim, but there was little of it to be shipped that year. Therefore it was no more than a matter of time before the captain should jump at the chance of some big money to be made by taking a boatload of animals across to the States. The offer looked good to him. The animals were finally got aboard and we were on our way."

"On would have laughed and cried both if you could have seen that cargo. There was a funny little zebra, who brayed about twenty-two hours out of the twenty-four, and who tried diligently to kick the door of his stable off its hinges. Then there was a sick giraffe which tottered to and fro on its ridiculous legs and looked at you with great brown eyes till you wanted to grab him 'round the neck and tell him to perk up and every thing would be all right. There were these, and a lot of others—including a real African jungle elephant."

"The elephant was a caution. He wouldn't eat. He wouldn't sleep. Even though he was loaded down with weights and trussed up with heavy iron chains, not a man of the native crew would go near him. His eyes were red, and his trunk and tail—which were about the only parts of him not tied fast—were always swinging angrily back and forth."

"For three days we sailed down the river. On the evening of the fourth day we sighted salt water and prepared to head into the open sea. When twilight came the natives gathered miles from land. A perfectly heavy swell was running, and the captain himself was on the bridge taking a last look about, before going below to his dinner."

"How that African elephant broke loose I can't tell. Men who saw him through the twilight told conflicting tales. One of the lascars dechanded said he grew twice his natural size and that his red eyes shot green flames one to five feet from his head."

"But we all knew that he was free by his hubbub and shouting, above which his wild trumpeting rose thunderously and triumphantly."

"Wood, canvas, chains, ropes, all were rent and pushed aside. Out into the main deck charged the giant brute. His distended ears stood out stiff from his head like huge sea shells. His eyes glowed. He was stark mad. Against the wooden rail he plunged. It gave way. He plunged overboard in a monstrous, splashing dive. Up he came. Then he set out swimming. Straight toward the distant shore he went. A long time afterward we saw him in the moonlight through our glasses climb up the sandy beach and stride back again into his jungle home."

Clerical Repatee

Rev. Dr. B., who had been invited to preach in a country church one Sunday, was annoyed to find the room so dark that his eyes could hardly penetrate the gloom. Beckoning to one of the deacons, he asked him to open the blinds and let in more light.

"We expect light from you," the deacon remarked facetiously.

"But I must get it from heaven first," was the quick rejoinder.

A Hero

Belle-Maud says that the man she marries must be a hero of the gridiron.

"Bess—He will be; if there's any cooking done he'll have to do it.—Boston Transcript."

Too Much Attention

"Very attentive husband."

"Excessively. Well, the honeymoon is young yet. If the bride while sewing said she had dropped a stitch he'd paw the floor over."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Mohammedan Legend

The al bork was a marvelous animal of surpassing swiftness on which Mohammed is said to have made a nocturnal journey from the temple at Mecca to Jerusalem and thence to the seventh heaven under the guidance of the angel Gabriel. Its eyes were like stars, and its body was resplendent with precious stones. It had the wings of an eagle, and a human face with the cheeks of a horse. According to Mohammedan faith the al bork is one of the few animals admitted to heaven.

BRIDGTON

Fitting Observance

Memorial Day was fittingly observed in Bridgton. The day's program began with a dinner at the Grand Army Hall, served by the Relief Corps for those who took part in the activities and after the dinner there was a patriotic concert in front of the hall by the North Fryeburg Band.

The parade then formed, with Marshall Oscar Hunt in the lead and the order as follows: Edward Lopenam Post American Legion, led by Commander Eddie Sanborn; Sons of Veterans, led by Commander Frank A. Webb; Grand Army Relief Corps; and Sons of Veterans Auxiliary. The parade marched to the town hall where an address was given by Robert Whitcomb of Portland, a prominent member of the Relief Corps, assisted by G. A. R. Commander, David Saunders and Rev. Wm. A. Richmond, pastor of the local Congregational Church. Several patriotic selections were played by the band here. From here they proceeded to the High Street cemetery where the graves of comrades were decorated, but further services were called off because of the heavy showers.

Annual Conference Closed

Sunday evening closed the annual Spring Convention of the Maine State Advent Christian Conference which was held at the local Advent Church beginning Thursday morning and which was well attended by delegates from the various churches in the conference, visitors and townspeople.

Prominent speakers on the program were Rev. H. H. Hewes of Boston; Rev. Clarke Derval of Goodwin's Mills; Rev. Retha Glover of Oxford; Rev. J. A. Nichols of Bangor, a former pastor here; Rev. E. A. Goodwin of Kennebec, a former pastor here; Rev. G. L. Young of Newburyport, Mass.; Rev. S. M. Wales of Mechanic Falls; Rev. C. O. Farnham of Somerville, Mass.; Rev. F. J. Coolidge of Waterville, Me., president of the conference; and also of the conference; Rev. F. E. Banks of Auburn; Rev. John Holman of Kezar Falls; Rev. Henry Coolbroth of Kennebec; Rev. Curtis Stanley of South Hiram.

Following the evening service, Sunday, there was an ordination service in which J. S. Lonsbury of East Rochester, N. H., a former resident of Bridgton, was ordained to the ministry. The ordination sermon was preached by Rev. Howard A. Mitchell, pastor of the local Advent Church.

At the Methodist church, Sunday evening, there was an illustrated lecture on "The Puritans in the Old World" and Monday evening on "The Puritans in the New World." These lectures were first given by Dwight Hillis at Brooklyn, N. Y., and were read here by Rev. Ernest F. Doughty, pastor of the church.

Mrs. Mabel Perkins gave a party to the young ladies who served as models in her recent Fashion Show, and their gentlemen friends at Camp Good-Enough on Highland Lake where she is stopping at present. About 25 guests were present and a very delightful evening was spent with games and dancing. Special features of the dancing were a forfeit fox trot and a forfeit waltz. Delicious refreshments were served. Mrs. Perkins was assisted in entertaining by Mr. and Mrs. Racburn Riley.

The June supper and business meeting of the B. & P. W. Club was held, Tuesday evening, at Moose Hall with a good number in attendance. Supper was served at 6:30 by Mrs. Edith Cameron, Mrs. Helen Chamberlain, Mrs. Ruth Kimery and Mrs. Dora Bond. At the business meeting it was voted to send fifty dollars to the Soldiers' Home at Togus for the purchase of a radio and also to furnish soap and towels for the Chamber of Commerce Rest Rooms in the Europa Club building this summer. This is the last business meeting until September.

Auvergne Hills Traced to Volcanic Upheavals

Although the hills of Auvergne in France do not rise to the altitude of the Alps or the Pyrenees, they have peculiar characteristics of their own. They were born and molded in the great volcanic upheavals. The ice king governs the glaciers, but here the fire king has reigned, says the Springfield Republican.

The Monts-Dome are one long chain of linked volcanoes, now as dead as the mountains in the moon. Nearly sixty jagged craters may still be counted. Even the Monts Dore and the Cantal hills, whose cone-shaped summits, the highest in Auvergne, stand out so impressively in the distance, are but the time-worn ruins of huge volcanoes.

All the country round about bears lasting traces of its dramatic past: beds of lava hidden by the fresh green turf; dark pillars, like the famous "Orques de Bort"; giants' causeways; odd dikes that might be dusty dragons; "sucs" and "pays" that might be the pustules of a fever-stricken earth—such are the features which give this central region a strange individuality that has been further intensified by the hand of man.

Twelfth Night Customs Kept Up in England

Many strange and curious rites and customs have long been connected with the observance of Twelfth night. The night is the evening before Epiphany, or the eve of January, also called Twelfthday and Old Christmas day.

In England the principal rite of the evening is the cutting of the "bean cake"—a cake in which a bean is cooked, the finder of which is made the king of the night and the following day.

It was in commemoration of this custom that Robert Baddeley, an English comedian of the Eighteenth century, who was long a favorite at the Drury Lane theater, made one of the strangest requests on record.

Baddeley died in 1704, and in 1715 will be bequeathed his cottage to a theatrical fund, requesting that a sum of three pounds be annually expended on a cake, to be cut on Twelfth night, in the Green room of the Drury Lane theater, and divided among the actors and actresses.

Perennial War Begins To Rout
Mosquitoes and Other Pests

"The time to fight mosquitoes and flies is when they are in the egg or larva stage, not after they have matured. An ounce of prevention will do the work of many traps and mosquito bars," declares Dr. J. Allen Patton, of Newark, N. J.

"Preventive work in the spring
will wipe out the breeding places," says Dr. Patton, who is the medical director of the Prudential Insurance Company, and will, to a large extent, eliminate these menaces to the public health."

The house fly feeds and breeds on every kind of filth, and is a remotely efficient carrier of disease. It specializes in typhoid, dysentery, Asiatic cholera and other diseases, including tuberculosis. Swarming the fly is an acceptable means of annihilating the full grown pest, but not so effective for it is much easier to clear away
the potential breeding place for a million flies than it is to swat or catch that million after they have grown to a lively maturity.

Filling in and draining are the two most effective means of eliminating mosquito hatching. Where these are not practicable the periodic use of coal oil to form a film
on the surface of the water is advisable.

Community effort is necessary in any campaign against the house fly or mosquito. It is not sufficient that your own stable and garage pail are not fly incubators, and that you have no stagnant water in your yard to hatch mosquitoes. Your neighbors also must see that their yards are in condition, else
your own efforts will have been wasted and they will share with you their mosquitoes and flies.

RAVENS IN THE TOWER

The Tower—the ancient fortress and gloomy state prison of London—is historically the most interesting spot in England. William the Conqueror began the Tower over eight hundred years ago. Earthquakes have shaken it, storms have beaten against it, shot and shell have been hurled at it, twice have attempts been made to blow it up, but the German high-explosive bombs have dropped around it. Yet for centuries the Tower of London has stood sentry on the Thames, unshaken and undiminished, just as it stood when William the Conqueror first reigned within its walls. It is now a government arsenal and is still kept in repair as a fortress.

Walking around and about, caving in the courtyard called the Green, or sitting silent on a bench near by, we saw the historic ravens of the Tower.
When forests grew close up to the most, flocks of ravens had an ideal place to build their nests in the turrets of the old building, and near future generations of Tower ravens. But as the city grew around and the forests were cut away, and with them fields of forage gone, the ravens would no longer nest in the old haunts, so now there are only two of the old birds left.

They have been there for many years, and are very, very old; really their age is unknown.

The guards told us that there was a legend that the two remaining ravens had the spirits of the young princes, Edward and Y., twelve years old, and his little brother, Richard, Duke of York, who were murdered in the Tower by the uncle, Richard III. These two ravens are tame and are petted by all about the place, and they look very pretty with their glossy black plumage going about the courts as if they owned the Tower.

Leave about one foot or more of space between the wall and the pile of ice. This space should be filled with sawdust, shavings, or chopped straw which prevents the rapid melting of the ice, and also prevents the water from keeping the ice house wall wet, so that it decays rapidly. There must be a passageway between the pile of ice and the roof to where the air is to pass through freely.

As electric power is becoming more common in country districts, there is greatly increasing interest in the use of artificial ice and electric refrigerat-ing units, which are a great deal more convenient, and in the long run probably as economical as natural stored ice.

Certified Potato Seed
Is First Large Factor

Gottlieb Pfeiffer, living northwest of Lafayette in Tippecanoe county, Ind., grew 85 bushels of real potatoes from 8 bushels of certified early Ohio and demonstrated to his own satisfaction
that good seed stock pays.

Pfeiffer secured 3 bushels of certified potato seed from the Tippecanoe county farm bureau last spring. The Ohio cost $1.31 a bushel. These he planted on a rich barn lot and gave them good care throughout the growing season. At digging time he harvested 85 bushels or the largest and best crop he had ever grown. Certified potato seed is the first big factor
in bringing the farm potato patch back.
Purdue potato specialists say—Purdue Experiment Station.

Plan to Kill Quack Grass

If you want to try killing quack
grass this year, here is one method that is recommended. Plow just deep enough to cut under the sod and turn the mat of roots to the surface. This will expose the underground stems to freezing air, and drying out. Then does not destroy them entirely. Then in the spring plow the field deep enough to bury the mass of roots at the bottom of the furrow.

A little tact and wise management
may often evade resistance, and carry a point, where direct force might be in vain.—Aton.

Bringing Aerial
Through WindowLead-in Strap Will Aid in Making More Efficient Installation.

Radio has shown that many of us are far from being mechanical geniuses.
In the early days of radio, back when every one built his own apparatus from socket to variometer, the problem of an aerial was an easy matter. The hardest job was convincing the landlord it would not invite disastrous calamity in the shape of lightning or flood.

The radio fan of yesterday was a mechanic from necessity. To install a radio set one needed to be an expert electrician. Where the lead-in came through the window and side of the house, for example, it was necessary to drill a hole and insert a long porcelain tube. Ordinary drills were too short for this purpose. It needed an extension bit, such as electricians use to drill through floors.

The inventive minds of the radio
world have been busily training to ease
the troublesome task of installing a radio set. One of the kinks along this line is the lead-in strap that solves the particular problem of bringing the aerial through the side of the house into the room where the set is to be used.

The strap consists of a strip of heavy tinned copper which has a phono-stock clip soldered to each end. Heavy insulation is wrapped around the center of the strap and under this is placed a strip of stout webbing. The strap is placed on the window sill, as shown in the illustration, and the window is closed, the sill resting on the insulated part.

It is a difficult matter to solder connections in an aerial system and, unless the joints are soldered or well-

Showing How Strap Is Placed on the Window Sill.

made, they soon corrode when exposed to the atmosphere. The lead-in wire may be fastened directly to the phono-stock clip; the wire to the set is fastened on the other end.

It is often better to place a lead-in at the top of the window, where it will be out of the way and there will be no danger of disturbing it by opening the window. It is better protected from the window in this manner and the lead-in does not show in front of the window. This labor-saver lightens the task of erecting an aerial and makes a more efficient installation. It has gained the favor of the landlords because its use does not in any way spoil
the appearance of the woodwork of the building.

RADIO RHYMES

By Robert Stewart Sutfille.

TWO BUGS

YOUNG SLIM JONES was out
for radio, with heart as well
as head; it had him in a demon
grip, the snailing neighbors said;
he read it, talked it, wrote it,
dreamed it, morning, noon and night; the old barn where he thunkered with it surely was a sight.

With odds and ends and things he'd purchase, he made many a set, and then he'd try out some new wrinkle to reception get; he'd take it down and re-assemble, re-buffed it or that,
and when outdoors, he used an outfit built within his hat.

He had antennae on the house-
top, loops he moved about; he even tried to get Alaska on a water spout; but the paramount
ambition that was in his head,
was how to get some good transmission, through springs upon his bed.

But this was where young Slim was bested, it somehow wouldn't go, although he tried a lot of tricks he'd learned 'bout equipment, tried a hundred things, but no signal, voice or music e'er came through the springs.

Then one day he told his problem to an engineer; told him how he had adjusted all his bedstead gear; how he'd tried out all the jim-cracks of his A1 set; but the springs had always failed him, not a sound he'd get.
Patiently the fellow listened;
then said with a shrug: "Youngster, in your bedstead circuit,
I have found a 'bug.'"

contemplated visit of Mr. and Mrs. Bannister to their old home in Yorkshire,

England. Mr. Baunister has been a clergyman in this country for many years and at present is pastor of the Congregational Society at South Paris. Mr. Whitman has been the warm, personal and admirable friend of Doctor Stephens for half a century. The topics for conversation took a wide range and were highly interesting, particularly those relating to the Doctor's original characters and productions. Mr. Baunister's description of the scenes of Old England, where he was born, incidents of voyages

across the ocean and events happening

during his ministerial labors and

Mr. Whitman's History of Oxford County, now being written.

Mrs. Stephens is an admirable hostess.

She makes her guests feel at home and does everything possible to add to their comfort and pleasure. The lunch prepared under her own eye, consisted of several courses and was most appetizing and enjoyable. The hosts broke up at four o'clock with heartfelt thanks of the guests and the best wishes for the future happiness of the hostess and host,

and bon voyage and safe return of Rev.

Baunister and his good wife, to their pastoral duties.

Having lived in New England and being well acquainted with the sentiment of our citizens, he has a message of good from us to the English people. They started Tuesday and expect to return on October.

E. M. Waterhouse of the Waterhouse

Detective Agency, and Mrs. Waterhouse, were in town, Thursday. Mr. Water-

house has been on the Hayward murder

case at Watrop.

Mrs. Helen Borenman went to Mous-

chusetts, Wednesday, where she will

Bohn Refrigerators

are all white porcelain Bohn Syphon Refrigerator, all metal refrigerator incorporating the famous Bohn Syphon system of low temperature and rapidly circulating dry air. Heavily insulated with flaxinum.

Safeguarding the food you eat is as important to your health as sanitary plumbing. A cheap refrigerator is often dangerous.

The Bohn Syphon System is the acme of refrigeration attested to by all railroads and Pullman dining cars. One of the best ice keepers on the market.

Eddy Refrigerators

You will observe that the doors are raised an inch or more above the inside floors. Thus the cold air sinking to the bottom does not escape when the doors are opened. They are double covered, that is, they are insulated like the walls, thereby preventing the escape of any coldness through them. Moisture from the melting ice has no effect on the contents of the food chambers of the Eddy. They are moisture proof. The Eddy System insures a continuous circulation of cold, dry air through the food chambers. Dampness is the first cause of decay and mould. Dry air is as requisite in a refrigerator as cold air.

Come in and purchase a Bohn or Eddy Refrigerator and keep your food sanitary.

ALMA PENDEXTER HAYDEN WRITES MORE ABOUT HER FORMER PUPILS IN NORWAY HIGH

I was pleased to meet with an esteemed pupil, Mrs. Grace Fance Leavitt, while she was in Norway a few years ago. We took our Thanksgiving dinner together at Beals Tavern as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Pendexter. Grace was always a very interesting pupil in my French class as she was always so near the perfect mark. Her son, John, was in my English class four years ago. He and Roscoe McKay used to read the parts of Brutus and Cassius in the quarrel scene and they did it very well. When John said, "Away slight man," they enjoyed acting fierce as if they were about to grapple with each other.

Glenn Andrews was also the son of a former pupil of mine and I think Henry Oullman's father also went to school to me. Glenn and Henry were great pals, brimful of fun, yet with an eye to their lessons and ready to do what I asked them. I read in the Advertiser that they are going on in their studies, one at Bates and the other at Kent's Hill and I wish them success in their new undertakings.

Mary Sanborn Stevens was a pupil of mine and her three children were also in my classes the second time I taught in Norway.

Mrs. Francis Holmes was one of the class of '77 and in the 90's her daughter, Helen, was in my classes. She was librarian for several years before her marriage.

Houghton Kimball is another of the boys who is away at school. He was very fluent at reciting in the Senior History class. I was always glad to call on him because "I know the book." Houghton has the qualities that make friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Roberts were pupils of mine, also Mr. and Mrs. Orin Holman. I have not seen any of them for many years but I have the very kindest remembrance of them and know, wherever they are, they are a credit to the community where they live. I hope to see them sometime.

I still think there was a talented artist or sculptor in the school four years ago. One day a boy was sent home by the Principal and told to stay a week as a punishment. The next morning, we saw on the board, in the "big room," a large monument as white as chalk could make it. A black space was left on the front, where "Steen was written, 'Secret to the memory of—departed this life,' etc. Someone had written underneath, "He still lives."

A boy came into the morning exercises late. The Principal told him to go home and get his excuse. He started as willingly as if he lived across the street, rather jauntily in his manner, and the Principal was puzzled to know why the boys laughed when he started home. But the boy really lived six miles away, in North Norway.

It is a great pleasure to remember my pupils among whom are my good friends, Elsie Swan, who was a loved teacher in the schools for some years; Estelle Bell, who was her classmate and close companion; Lillian Bartlett, Carrie Tucker, Elsie Fawcett, Della Noyes, Honor Gurney, Georgie Swain, Fred Brown, Mabel and Frank Brown, Victor Partridge, Eugene Dill, and Lottie Stevens, Junita Dismore, who I think is a granddaughter of a former pupil, Annie Parker, Lizzie Kilgore, Fredland Howe and very many others who come to mind at times. I can see the old school building and the recitation room and in memory the faces of those who came into my classes. Mrs. J. C. Harriman, Fred Rowe, Freda Schuch, and others come to mind. When I visit Norway I forget that so many are no longer there. Whether passing along the shady street or riding by familiar places or at the lake where we had such good times. Beals Tavern was my home for a number of years and Norway High still recalls happy days.

Norway is the town most dear to me. I hope to see many of my friends there this summer.

The Most Simple, Lightest Draft Windrow Loader

We want you to come in and see what we believe is the lightest draft windrow loader ever built—it is so light draft that one man can pull it, on level land, elevating a fair-sized windrow onto the wagon.

JOHN DEERE

Dain System Windrow Loader

The Dain System Loader is light draft because of its simple construction—only one cylinder or drum, and is mounted on the axle. There are no gears. The loading parts are slowly driven; there is no beating or threshing of the hay; hay compression parts are automatically yielding, giving ample capacity; and the frame is mounted on the wheels in such a manner that the loader pulls easily under a heavy load.

The Dain System Windrow Loader is especially suitable for hilly land and for handling hay that has been air-cured in accordance with the Dain System. This loader will handle beans, alfalfa, clover and other kinds of hay gently without loss of leaves.

Don't forget that the Dain System Windrow Loader is on display at our store now.

The station will cost $50,000,000, and will have a capacity of 700,000 kilowatts, or approximately 1,000,000 horse power, and will have a capacity 100,000 kilowatts greater than the projected power development at Niagara Falls, according to the announcement.

FARM STOCK

FIELD BREEDING IS ALWAYS UNRELIABLE

It is the usual custom in eastern Canada to raise two litters of pigs from each sow each year. In order to take advantage of the warm seasons this practice necessitates early spring and early fall farrowing. The earlier in the spring the first litter can be handled the more leeway there is for getting the pigs weaned and the sows re-bred to farrow before cold weather.

Not many farms, however, are equipped to handle little pigs economically or satisfactorily before March, which brings the fall breeding season in November or early December. The question then arises as to the best and most satisfactory ways of handling the breeding herd during this period. Under most farm conditions one of two general systems is usually found to fit in with the other farm operations with a minimum requirement of extra time and labor.

The first and probably by far the most widely used is field breeding, where the sow is turned in with the sow herd on the day when the breeding season is to start, writes R. W. Crampton of MacDonald College in the Montreal Star. From then on until all have been bred, or in some cases until farrowing time approaches, the sow is a member of the sow herd, and the detail of the breeding left entirely with him.

About the only commendable thing about this system is its convenience, which in this case is simply a polite word for shiftlessness. Field breeding makes for unreliable records. Dates of breeding, checking of sows not settling promptly, the vigor and activity of the sow and the regulation of his services to best conserve his strength and potency—all these factors are lost to the immediate touch and control of the breeder.

Only this last summer the author's attention was drawn to a case where a yearling boar ran all the season sows, and not until fall was it definitely known that none of the sows were in pig. The herdsman wasn't sure whether the boar had bred them or not, though he said he had seen him "nosing around" a good deal. Which was to blame—the boar, the sows or the breeder? In other words, in this system of field breeding the breeder becomes a casual spectator—not a manager.

Calves Should Be Given Liberal Feed of Grain

Unless the cows in the herd are exceptional milkers, calves intended for fat yearlings should be started on corn, kafir, milo, barley, wheat or oats, when from four to six weeks old. Nothing so stimulates the growth and early maturity as milk fresh from the dam, but in all cases calves should be fed liberally on grain for at least one month before weaning time. Every effort should be made to get the calves through the weaning period without loss of their baby fat. The grain ration should be increased so as to permit as little change in their rate of growth and fattening as possible.

Some feeders build "creeps" in the pastures or lots so that the calves can get their grain without disturbance by the cows. Creeps consist of small pens with openings which permit only the calves to enter. These openings may have rollers on each side to prevent bruising the calves.

Live Stock Hints

Did you ever wear a collar that didn't fit? Well, a horse or mule is worse off yet with a collar too large or too small.

Calves may be raised on a very small amount of milk, provided they are fed a liberal ration of grain and a leguminous hay.

Which did you bring home from the county fair—prize money or experience? Either one will help you to improve your exhibit for next year.

Protect your animals from the cold. This will make them more comfortable, and will save you feed.

Be sure the sheep have shelter from cold rains. Shaver saves feed and makes the wool clip heavier.

It requires feed to carry sheep through the winter, if the best returns in wool and lambs are to be made. Begin feeding the ewes about lambing time and feed them until pasture is good.

It might be well to make arrangements to feed your sows at least fifty yards or more from their sleeping quarters and force them to take exercise in walking back and forth between feeding floor and hog house.

Breeding cattle especially need extra feed. Calves cannot be grown out without liberal feeding, and there is no demand for stunted, underweight breeding animals. Corn silage or hay with cottonseed meal or velvet beans will put them through in good shape.

THOUGHTLETS

Let one carry evil report habitually and by and by one's coming will put others to flight.

When money grows so fast that one doesn't know what to do with it, philanthropy becomes a pleasant pastime.

An alarm clock will put you to sleep in case you ought to get up, but it makes no difference whether you get up never a wink more will you get.

Oil is Power

Most motorists think of lubricating oil merely as something to reduce friction between moving metal parts. While this is a very necessary thing, the principal function of a good lubricating oil is to preserve and conserve power by sealing, as completely as possible, the piston head union in the combustion chamber.

A poor lubricating oil cannot do this successfully or completely. The tremendous heat at which motors operate will break down and thin down oils of insufficient body. The result is loss of power and excessive crankcase dilution.

Socony Motor Oil is refined to meet the requirements of all types of motors now on the market. Highly heat-resisting, it yet has sufficient viscosity to effect an efficient leak-proof seal around the piston head. It consumes cleanly.

Insist upon Socony Motor Oil; resist cheap and spurious imitations.

*Always consult the reliable Socony Lubrication Chart. It tells exactly—summer or winter—the proper grade of Socony for your engine.

Remember that SOCONY is "Standard"

Chassis Lubrication

Do not fail to lubricate periodically your chassis with Socony Gear Oil or Socony Gear Compound. It gives miles of added power.
